LTEC 5300 - Learning and Cognition

3 hours

Study and analysis of models of cognitive systems including acquiring, manipulating, storing, interpreting and using information; special emphasis on the unique interactions between human information processing and computer-based processing as they apply to the instructional environment. Students are also exposed to the wide array of instructional theories that shape modern instructional design.

Prerequisite(s): None.

Course specific fees (in addition to tuition and mandatory):
Academic (AF) per hour: $13.80